CARLAND DISFAVORS GOLD STANDARD

E. J. Garland, M.P., delivered an address on the Gold Standard last week at a largely attended meeting held in the Parish Hall Drumheller.

The following summary of Mr. Garland's address appeared in the last issue of The Drumheller Review:

"Mr. Garland made a strong plea for Canada going off the gold standard, stating that as a national currency gold had ceased to be a real basis. He referred to purchasing power as being the rolling stock of commerce and unless one had the purchasing power, goods are no good.

"The speaker showed how England had gone off the gold standard three times within the past seventy years and, following this action, England had enjoyed her most prosperous times. In the age of the world, he said, it was only a matter of yesterday that the gold standard came into existence, and ever since the gold standard came in there has been the same periods of depression, while they had been increasing. We were told, on the other hand, that all would be well with the introduction of the gold standard. Depression followed England's return to the gold standard in 1925, and now, since she has again gone off the gold standard, her wheels of industry have begun to move.

"Canada started to build up a trade in wheat with China, and prospects looked bright until Australia came on the scene with her depreciated exchange and undersold Canada on the Chinese grain market. Where there is a depreciated exchange you can always undersell your competitor, he claimed.

Canada, he maintained, should get off the gold standard immediately, stating that it was madness for Canada not to go off the gold standard. France and the United States had seventy-five per cent of the world's gold, as France had demanded that all her debts be paid in gold, and coupled with the United States action, this situation of two countries having seventy-five per cent of the world's gold resulted. The speaker predicted that Canada could forge ahead if she went off the gold standard, while people were demanding a change from the present condition, where there was such an ample supply of those things, produced by the people, for the country's and the world's need, but, no purchasing power to effect the exchange. Mr. Garland quoted authorities to prove his points, as his address proceeded, and at the conclusion, he answered many questions from members of the audience, on this, at present, all absorbing topic the "Gold Standard."

What did you do with your money?

Friend—Well, I spent a hundred shooting crap, fifty in a poker game, fifty on cigarettes, twenty-five on taxi fare and twenty-five on a girl.

But that only makes three hundred. What did you do with the balance?

Friend—Oh, I dunno. I must have spent it foolishly.

TENNIS CLUB DANCE ON OCTOBER 23RD

Posters are out announcing the dance to be held by the Carbon Tennis Club in the Farmers' Exchange Hall, Carbon, on Friday evening, October 23rd. This is the first big dance of the season and a record crowd is expected to be on hand for the event. The music will be furnished by The Albertans and will be the best obtainable. Refreshments will also be served, free of charge.

PROPOSE TO LICENSE CALGARY BUS LINE IF FOUND EXPRESS PACKAGES ARE TRANSPORTED

Investigations into the operations of the Calgary-Drumheller bus line will be made by Chief Constable John Duncan on the instructions of council. It is alleged that express deliveries are made to local stores by the bus company, and, if this statement is substantiated, it is possible that the company will be called on to pay a license to the city.—Drumheller Mail.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT HAS DISSOLVED

The British Parliament has been dissolved and a general election will be held on October 27th, Premier Ramsay MacDonald announced last week.

The National government will appeal to the people as a unit. Prime Minister MacDonald at last having won his struggle to keep Conservatives and the National government Liberals together under his leadership. He also has the assistance of 22 Liberal members of parliament under Sir John Simon, who have pledged to support the prime minister in any course he follows.

In his speech the premier asked that the National government be given a free hand. Subsequently, the leaders of the parties will issue their own appeals, dovetailing their party programmes with the government's platform.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES

The Blairmore Enterprise has been making a study of Fraternal Societies and hopes to develop a large class of candidates. In order to facilitate the work he has been publishing some of the preparatory work, which to most publishers will be most interesting. The Enterprise says: "The up-to-date way in which to enter a newspaper office is this: Advance to the inner door and give three raps. The angel will attend to the alarm. You will then tell your name, postoffice address and the number of years you owe for the paper. You will then be admitted into the sanctum and will advance to the centre of the room and address the editor with the following countersign: Hold the right hand about two feet from the body with the thumb and forefinger clasping currency or cheque, which you will drop into the editor's hand, saying "Were you looking for this?" The editor will clasp your hand, pressing the bill and will say, "You bet!"

CROWS BLAMED FOR SHORTAGE OF DUCKS

In the Alberta Farmer, Frank E. Farley, of Camrose, president of the Alberta Fish and Game Association, states that crows are more to blame for the shortage of ducks than drought.

"If we could destroy 90 per cent of the crows in America our main troubles would be over as regards the ducks. The remaining 10 per cent could not clean out poor ducks even though nesting cover was scarce. If we could do this, then it would be up to us to stop the killing of ducks as much as we could, saving every pair possible," Mr. Farley stated.

"Hungarians are becoming terribly common, and it will be necessary to open their season on September 1st, next year, or we are going to hear from the farmers, who already claim that the large flocks are knocking down their grain as they alight en masse."

SUBSCRIPTION OFFER CLOSES NOVEMBER 1ST

The unique subscription offer of three bushels of wheat for a year's subscription to The Carbon Chronicle, expires on November 1st and anyone wishing to take advantage of this bargain must do so before that time. Positively no exceptions will be made.

This offer was made to farmers of the district in order to help them receive a better price for their grain and if they are going to take advantage of the offer they will have to act quickly. As was advertised at the time, the offer was only good for sixty days and this time will be up on November 1st.

ALBERTA NEWS

A 25-acre field of wheat on Senator D. E. Riley's farm near High River, averaged 48 bushels to the acre.

Hail losses in Alberta are less this year than for the past four years, but higher than the average of the past thirteen years, according to a statement issued by the Provincial Hail Insurance Board. The loss this year totalled $154,000 on a risk of $1,596,000.

A crop of Wheat going 75 bushels to the acre has been reported from the Oliver district, east of Edmonton. Isidor Paradis has just threshed a four-acre field of Garnet which yielded him 300 bushels of wheat.

Interest in gold in the foothills of Alberta has again been aroused, about 25 Indians filing claims at the government land office in the region north-west of Morley.

Wheat threshed in the Gleichen district is running from 6 to 25 bushels to the acre.

Approximately 120 men, registered as transient single unemployed, have been given work on the Jasper-Banff highway.

Judge J.D.R. Stewart, of the Acadia district court, died suddenly at Hanna about 8 o'clock Sunday evening of the hemorrhage of the brain.

As a measure of economy the usual district conventions of teachers will be discontinued for this year. School authorities and teachers reading this notice are asked to give it as wide publicity as possible that no confusion may result.

Fire swept through the main business section of Bellis, Alta., Sunday morning, fanned by a stiff breeze. The hotel, hardware store, general store, implement warehouse and one dwelling were destroyed, the total loss being estimated at about $30,000. The fire originated in the implement warehouse, the cause being unknown. Bellis is 94 miles north east of Edmonton.

The Chamber of Commerce will collect a car of potatoes, vegetables and roots of all kinds that the farmers can dispose of for the people of Southern Saskatchewan or Alberta.—St. Paul Journal.

REGINA SEED FAIR POSTPONED

The World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, which was to have been held in Regina in 1932, has been postponed until 1933. Announcement to this effect was made Thursday night by Hon. Robert Weir, federal minister of agriculture and chairman of the national committee of the grain show, after he had received resolutions from the council of the Regina Board of Trade and the directors of the Regina and Industrial Exhibition Association, urging postponement for a year.

Mr. Weir said he was in complete accord with the terms of the resolutions and favored the postponement of the grain exhibition and conference for one year.

One of the biggest difficulties in reaching this decision was to determine the effect postponement or cancellation would have on the city of Regina, in view of the commitments that the city has already made.

More than two score countries were expected to take part in the Regina World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, plans for which were started two years ago. Exhibits of all varieties of grain had been promised from many European countries, Australia and New Zealand, the United States and all provinces of Canada. The Prince of Wales had been invited by the Dominion government to open the exhibition.

"Heck," exclaimed the mother, reproachfully, "you've been fighting again."

"I couldn't help it. He insulted me." "That was no reason for fighting. You should have remembered to give him a soft answer."

"I did. I hit him with a chunk of mud."

"I'd just love to be a farmer; to live with the blue sky overhead."

"That would be all right if the blue sky was the farmer's only overhead."

Tourist—So your father knows the exact year, month and day he will die, does he?

Negro—Yassah; he had ought to. The judge told him.

A Time For Self Control

As Shakespeare once put it, "the times are out of joint." These are troublous days, and days of trouble. Men's nerves are on edge, and little things that would be passed over lightly in good times are every day becoming the cause of quarrels. Because nerves are on edge, tempers are not under control even to the extent they usually are, and in the case of most people tempers are never controlled as they should be.

Today people will argue and dispute about almost anything, and lose their tempers over the most trivial matters which are of no importance whatever. The great Bard of Avon wrote: "Beware of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in, bear it that the opposed may beware of thee." Abraham Lincoln, however, said that while this advice was good, it was not the best, and he substituted: "Quarrel not at all. No man, resolved to make the most of himself, can spare time for personal contention. Still less can he afford to take the consequences, including the vitiation of his temper and the loss of self-control. Yield larger things to which you show no more than equal right; and yield lesser ones through clearly your own. Better give your path to a dog than be bitten by him in contesting for the right. Even killing the dog would not cure the bite."

This is not to say that a man should sacrifice so much as one important conviction, or yield his principles for the sake of peace or profit. There are times when a man should get mad, when we could feel nothing but contempt for him if he did not. But such occasions are few and far between. The trivial, inconsequential thing should never be the cause of disputation or outbreak of temper.

We are reminded of the three-word Latin motto above the doorway of the ancient chamber in the Guildhall in which the aldermen of London hold their court and which no one of them can fail to see: "Audi alteram partem." Hear the other side.

And in old England, with its long years of experience in handling human beings of all classes and degrees in all parts of the world, how much wiser than other nations is she in dealing with agitators. The Old Land long ago learned that talk, like any other gas, is dangerous only when compressed. Younger countries, Canada included, has yet to learn that lesson. So we find in London, instead of attempting to suppress the Hyde Park orators, the British authorities supply police protection for them, let them say their say, and do not quarrel with them.

And what is the cause of most misunderstandings, leading to loss of temper and open quarrels? Is it not that in our self-opinionated state we are wasting our energies and increasing our blood pressure trying, over trivial things, to set somebody else right? Instead of accepting people for what they are, we are forever trying to mold their lives to our preconceived model, endeavouring to organize them. How many married couples live in a state of tension because one or both seek to make the other over. If once the idea could get abroad that the real appeal of the sexes is the fact that they are not alike, what a great gain that would be. And what applies to the sexes applies equally to races, creeds, and other established facts of life.

Let us stop trying to organize the lives of other people, and attend strictly to the task of organizing our own. Let us master the lesson that, after all, there are comparatively few issues in this world worth disputing over. It would, of course, be a sad day for the world if righteous indignation vanished from it, if men became so immersed in the scramble for profit and place of power that they could no longer get mad over palpable wrongs and gross injustices. But the point is that too much of the world's anger is poured out in defence of pride or prejudice instead of conviction.

As one old Roman philosopher said: "Many have suffered for talking; none ever suffered for keeping silent." And, on another occasion, "We cannot be wrong in leaving other people's business alone."

Using Seed Cleaning Units

Saskatchewan Municipalities Taking Advantage Of Outfits Supplied

Several municipalities in Saskatchewan already have made applications to the Field Crop Branch of the Department of Agriculture for seed cleaning units as supplied by the Saskatchewan Government in co-operation with the Dominion Seed Branch. Under this scheme, the Governments furnish the machinery, the municipality being required to provide the motive power and the housing accommodation. All the outfits supplied to date have been of an itinerant nature, and may be transported from farm to farm during the seed cleaning period.

Hunters In B.C. Are Using Bow And Arrow For Big Game

Near Longworth, B.C., sixty miles east of Prince George, big game is being hunted with bow and arrow by F. Nagler, of Milwaukee, Wis., an archer of national repute. William W. Tefft, of Jackson, Mich., who has tracked animals in many countries of the world, is accompanying Mr. Nagler.

The expedition, which comprises five members, left Longworth a short time ago. Other members of the novel hunt are Leslie Hale, Arthur Read, of Longworth, and R. A. McLeod, of Dome Creek.

Suffered Severe, Painful Cramps In Her Stomach

Those terrible cramps in the stomach that double you up in pain and make you break out in a cold perspiration, may be stopped by a few doses of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Lloyd Jones, 204 Argyle St., Halifax, N.S., writes: "I have suffered greatly from severe and painful cramps in my stomach. I tried several remedies without result. One day a friend advised me to take Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so I bought a bottle and got instant relief."

Sheep Buried In Snow

Found Alive Eight Weeks After South African Storm

Hundreds of South Africans saw a fall of snow for the first time in their lives during a recent heavy storm on Table Mountain and other Cape ranges. While the present season is "winter" on this side of the equator, snow has rarely been seen this far south.

From the interior comes a story of how 18 sheep lived for eight weeks under an avalanche of snow in the Molteno district.

Although completely hemmed in, they managed to keep alive by breathing through the melting snow and eating the grass on the floor of the aperture, as well as snow. When found they were little more than skeletons. They are now recovering.

AS SLIM AS AT 20

Still Fit and Active at 55

"I have been taking the small dose of Kruschen Salts every morning for the last three years. I wouldn't be without them in the house. I used to suffer with constipation and piles, but am never troubled in that way now. I am 55 years, and as slim as when I was 20. I have to work very hard, as I have my family and an invalid father to attend to, and I always say it's the Kruschen that keeps me fit."—M. S.

There's nothing like hard work and activity for keeping superfluous fat away. The trouble with most folks is finding the necessary energy. That is where Kruschen comes in.

After you have had your daily supply of Kruschen every morning for a couple of weeks you'll get what is known the world over as "That Kruschen Feeling."

The urge for activity will fill your entire being—you'll not be content to sit in the old arm chair after your day's work is done.

You'll feel the spirit of youth within you—what a joyous feeling—you'll want to take long walks, play games and your work will cease to be a hardship—it will become a pleasure.

Trade and Commerce

Oregon has a buy-at-home campaign and so has the state of Washington. Each is cancelling contracts which have been made across the border. Keep it up. Buy only in your own state, buy only in your own home town, buy only on your own side of the street, buy only from a member of your own family and thus get rich. The whole idea of trade and commerce must, it seems, be old-fashioned and foolish.—Toronto Star.

It has a countless record of relief to its credit. It is sold almost everywhere.

Saskatchewan University

Increased Attendance Is Shown For the Current Term

Former students returning to Saskatchewan University brought up the enrolment in the regular classes to 1,043 or 47 less than last year, announces President W. C. Murray. To offset this the number enrolled in the correspondence courses has increased by 57 to 303, giving a net increase of ten students.

The decline is mainly in the college of arts and sciences. The College of Pharmacy shows reduced enrolment, and engineering a considerable increase. The other colleges have about the same numbers as on the corresponding day last year.

City Covers Big Acreage

Regina is one of the largest cities in Canada. It covers 8,408 acres, more than twice as big as many eastern cities of similar or even larger population. Within the confines of Regina are more than 500 acres of civic parks, nearly 100 acres of exhibition grounds, besides a great deal of vacant property. Regina could comfortably accommodate twice its present population without extending the boundaries.

Canada Has Thousands Of Level Crossings

Removal Of All Impossible Says Hon. Frank Oliver

The Dominion at present has some 28,000 level crossings scattered along railways from coast to coast despite expenditure of $15,189,000 over the past 21 years towards elimination and amelioration of this menace to traffic, according to Hon. Frank Oliver, advisory officer to the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, in a paper before the recent convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association at Lucerne-in-Quebec.

In 1930, a total of 341 railway crossing accidents in Canada took a toll of 115 lives and 475 injured, Mr. Oliver stated. Through the efforts of the Board of Railway Commissioners much had been done to improve railway crossing conditions Mr. Oliver continued.

Crossing accidents on provincial highways formed less than one-third of the total for 1930, the great majority of crossing fatalities occurring on country roads.

The annual government grant of $200,000 to the Board for the railway crossing fund was inadequate, the speaker said, and it would be impossible to entirely remove all level crossings in the Dominion.

J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles of Ontario, said the death rate exceeded three persons a day on Canada's roads. The total of automobile fatalities in the year 1930 was 1,289 and the injured were approximately 40,000.

Kind Words Cost Nothing

There sometimes are excuses to be made for the men and women who are stingy with money, but not for those who are stingy with appreciation. Kind words cost nothing at all; yet some of you are as reluctant to make use of them as any old miser is to part with one of his cherished gold pieces.

No Longer a Bugbear

Britain's Departure From Gold Standard Not Likely To Harm Anybody

The United States owns nearly half the gold supply of the world. At the beginning of the present month, United States-owned gold amounted to $4,983,000,000, a new high record. Yet in the Republic at this very moment, some millions of men, women and children are fearfully wondering how they are going to keep warm and fed this coming winter.

Perhaps the position of the United States has little real relation to the gold standard in Britain, or its departure from it. Yet existing world realities have knocked so many ancient and cherished theories into a cocked hat it will be surprising if what has been done in Britain visits much harm upon anybody. Currency changes, most certainly, long ago ceased to be a bugbear.—Ottawa Journal.

FASHION HINT

"How to make my old short skirts conform to the new length was a problem to me until I hit on this plan. I dropped the hems; and as the part that had been turned under was darker than the rest, I redyed the entire dress, after having bleached the goods, following directions in the Diamond Dyes package."

"I used Diamond Dyes for the redyeing, of course. I have dyed many things with these wonderful colors. They have saved me many dollars and have never failed to give perfect results—smooth, even colors—fast to wear and washing. Friends think my things are new when I redye or tint them with Diamond Dyes. They do give the most gorgeous colors!"

Similarity Of Names

Postal officials direct attention to the similarity in post office names in Canada and the United States and ask persons to be careful in addressing mail matter to such points. "SICK HEADACHE?"

It is not necessary to give-in to headaches. It is just a bit old-fashioned! The modern woman who feels a headache coming on at any time, takes some tablets of Aspirin and heads it off.

Keep Aspirin handy, and keep your engagements. Headaches, systemic pains, come at inconvenient times. So do colds. You can end them before they're fairly started if you'll only remember this handy, harmless form of relief. Carry it in your purse and insure your comfort while shopping; your evening's pleasure at the theatre. Those little nagging aches that bring a case of "nerves" by day are ended in a jiffy. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking Aspirin! You'll find these tablets always help. In every package of Aspirin tablets are proven directions which cover colds, headaches, sore throat, toothache, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, and even rheumatism.

The tablets stamped Bayer won't fail you, and can't harm you. They don't depress the heart. They don't upset the stomach. So take them whenever you need them, and take enough to end the pain. Aspirin is made in Canada.

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

— BY —

MARGARET PEDLER

Author of
"The Splendid Folly," "The Hermit
Of Far End,"
Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

"It is as an insurance of good health that I come," he informed Jean gravely.

"Oh, yes, we are not here merely for pleasure—comme ees autres"—Madame de Varigny gestured smilingly towards a merry party of men and girls who had just come in from lugging and were stamping the snow from off their feet amid gay little outbursts of chaff and laughter. "We are here just as last year, Peterson"—the suddenly muted quality of her voice implied just the right amount of sympathetic recollection—"so that mon pauvre mari may assure himself of yet another year of health."

The faintly ironical gleam in her eyes convinced Jean that, as she had shrewdly begun to suspect, the little Count was a "malade imaginaire," and once again she found herself wondering what could be the circumstances responsible for the union of two such dissimilar personalities as the high-bred, hypochondriacal little Count and the rather splendid-looking but almost certainly plebeian-born woman who was his wife.

She intended, later on, to ask her father if he would supply the key to the riddle, but he had contrived to drift off during the course of her conversation with the Varignys, and, when at last she found herself free to join him, he had disappeared altogether.

She thought it very probable that he had gone out to watch the progress of a ski-ing match to which he had referred with some enthusiasm earlier in the day, and she smiled a little at the characteristic way in which he had extricated himself, at her expense, from the inconvenience of his unexpected rencontre with the Varignys.

But, two hours later, she realized that once again his superficial air of animation had deceived her. From her window she saw him coming along the frozen track that led from the hillside cemetery, and for a moment she hardly recognized her father in that suddenly shrunk, huddled figure of a man, stumbling down the path, his head thrust forward and sunken on his breast.

Her first imperative instinct was to go and meet him. Her whole being ached with the longing to let him feel the warm rush of her sympathy, to assure him that he was not utterly alone. But she checked the impulse, recognizing that he had no use for any sympathy or love which she could give.

She had never really been anything other than exterior to his life, outside his happiness, and now she felt intuitively that he would wish her to remain equally outside the temple of his grief.

He was the type of man who would bitterly resent the knowledge that any eyes had seen him at a moment of such utter, pitiable self-revelation, and it was the measure of her understanding that Jean waited quietly till he should choose to come to her.

When he came, he had more or less regained his customary poise, though he still looked strained and shaken. He addressed her abruptly.

"I've decided to go straight on to Marseilles and sail by the next boat, Jean. There's one I can catch if I start at once."

"At once?" she exclaimed, taken aback. "You don't mean—today?"

He nodded.

"Yes, this very evening. I find I can get down to Montreux in time for the night mail." Then, answering her unspoken thought: "You'll be quite all right. You will be certain to hear from Lady Anne in a day or two, and, meanwhile, I'll ask Madame de Varigny to play chaperon. She'll be delighted"—with a flash of the ironical humour that was never long absent from him.

"Who was she before she married the Count?" queried Jean.

"I can't tell you. She is very reticent about her antecedents—probably with good reason"—smiling grimly. "But she is a big and beautiful person, and our little Count is obviously quite happy in his choice."

"She is rather a fascinating woman," commented Jean.

W. N. U. 1911

"Yes—but preferable as a friend rather than an enemy. I don't know anything about her, but I wouldn't mind wagering that she has a dash of Corsican blood in her. Anyway, she will look after you all right till Anne Brennan writes."

"And if no letter comes?" suggested Jean. "Or supposing Lady Anne can't have me? We're rather taking things for granted, you know."

His face clouded, but cleared again almost instantly.

"She will have you. Anne would never refuse a request of mine. If not, you must come on to me, and I'll make other arrangements,"—vaguely. "I'll let the next boat go, and stay in Paris till I hear from you. But I can't wait here any longer."

He paused, then broke out hurriedly:

"I ought never to have come to this place. It's haunted. I know you'll understand—you always do understand, I think. You quiet child—why I must go."

And Jean, looking with the clear eyes of unhurt youth into the handsome, grief-ravaged face, was suddenly conscious of a shrinking fear of that mysterious force called love, which can make, and so swiftly, terribly unmake, the lives of men and women.

CHAPTER III.

The Stranger On the Ice

"And this friend of your father's? you have not heard from her yet?"

Jean and Madame de Varigny were breakfasting together the morning after Peterson's departure.

"No. I hoped a letter might have come for me by this morning's post. But I'm afraid I shall be on your hands a day or two longer"—smiling.

"But it is a pleasure!" Madame de Varigny reassured her warmly. "My husband and I are here for another week yet. After that we go on to St. Moritz. He is suddenly discontented with Montavan. If, by any chance, you have not heard from Lady—Lady—I forget the name—"

"Lady Anne Brennan," supplied Jean.

A curiously concentrated expression seemed to flit for an instant across Madame de Varigny's face, but she continued smoothly:

"Mais, oui!—Lady Brennan. 'Eh bien,' if you have not heard from her by the time we leave for St. Moritz, you must come with us. It would add greatly to our pleasure."

"It's very good of you," replied Jean. She felt frankly grateful for the suggestion, realizing that if, by any mischance, the letter should be delayed till then, Madame de Varigny's offer would considerably smooth her path. In spite of Glyn's decision that she must join him in Paris, should Lady Anne's invitation fail to materialize, she was well aware that he would not greet her appearance on the scene with any enthusiasm.

"I suppose"—the Countess was speaking again—"I suppose Brennan is a very frequent—a common name in England?"

The question was put casually, more as though for the sake of making conversation than anything else, yet Madame de Varigny seemed to await the answer with a curious anxiety.

"Oh, no," Jean replied readily enough, "I don't think it is a common name. Lady Anne married into a junior branch of the family, I believe," she added.

"That would not be considered a very good match for a peer's daughter, surely?" hazarded the Countess. "A junior branch? I suppose there was a romantic love-affair of some kind behind it?"

"It was Lady Anne's second marriage. Her first husband was a Tor-marin—one of the oldest families in England." Jean spoke rather stiffly. There was something jarring about the pertinacious catechism.

Madame de Varigny's lips trembled as she put her next question, and not even the dusky fringe of lashes could quite soften the sudden tense gleam in her eyes.

"Tor—ma—rin!" She pronounced the name with a French inflection, evidently finding the unusual English word a little beyond her powers. "What a curious name! That, I am sure, must be uncommon. And this Lady Anne—she has children—sons? No?"

"Oh, yes. She has two sons."

"Indeed?" Madame de Varigny looked interested. "And what are the sons called?"

Jean regarded her with mild surprise. Apparently the subject of nomenclature had a peculiar fascination for her.

"I really forget. My father did once tell me, but I don't recollect what he said."

A perceptible shade of disappointment passed over the other's face, then, as though realizing that she had exhibited a rather uncalled-for curiosity, she said deprecatingly:

"I fear I seem intrusive. But I am so interested in your future—I have taken a great fancy to you, mademoiselle. That must be my excuse." She rose from the table, adding smilingly: "At least you will not find it dull, since Lady Anne has two sons. They will be companions for you."

Jean rose, too, and together they passed out of the salle a manger.

"And what do you propose to do with yourself today?" asked the Countess, pausing in the hall. "My husband and I are going for a sleigh drive. Would you care to come with us? We should be delighted."

Jean shook her head.

"It's very kind of you. But I should really like to try my luck on the ice. I haven't skated for some years, and as I feel a trifle shaky about beginning again, Monsieur Griole, who directs the sports, has promised to coach me up a bit some time this morning."

"Bon!" Madame de Varigny nodded pleasantly. "You will be well occupied while we are away. Au revoir, then, till our return. Perhaps we shall walk down to the rink later to witness your progress under Monsieur Griole's instruction."

She smiled mischievously, the smile irradiating her face with a sudden charm. Jean felt as though, for a moment, she had glimpsed the woman the Countess might have been but for some happening in her life which had soured and embittered it, setting that strange implacability within the liquid depths of her soft, southern eyes.

She was still speculating on Madame de Varigny's curious personality as she made her way along the beaten track that led towards the rink, and then, as a sudden turn of the way brought the sheet of ice suddenly into full view, all thoughts concerning the bunch of contradictions that goes to make up individual character were swept out of her mind.

In the glory of the morning sunlight the stretch of frozen water gleamed like a shield of burnished silver, whilst on its further-side rose great pine-woods, mysteriously dark and silent, climbing the steeply rising ground towards the mountains.

There were a number of people skating, and Jean discovered Monsieur Griole in the distance, supervising the practice of a pretty American girl who was cutting figures with an ease and exquisite balance of lithe body that hardly seemed to stand in need of the instructions he poured forth so volubly. Probably, Jean decided, the American had entered for some match and was being coached up to concert pitch accordingly.

She stood for a little time watching with interest the varied performances of the skaters. Bands of light-hearted folk, indulging in the sport just for the sheer enjoyment of it, sped gaily by, broken snatches of their talk and laughter drifting back to her as they passed, whilst groups of more accomplished skaters performed intricate evolutions with an earnestness and intensity of purpose almost worthy of a better cause.

Jean felt a little stranded and forlorn. She would have liked someone to share her enthusiasm for the marvels achieved by the figure-skaters—and to laugh with her a little at their deadly seriousness and at the scraps of heated argument anent the various schools of technique which came to her, borne on the still, clear air.

Presently her attention was attracted by the solitary figure of a man who swept past her in the course of making a complete circle of the rink. He skimmed the ice with the free assurance of an expert, and as he passed, Jean caught a fleeting glimpse of a supple, sinewy figure, and of a lean, dark face, down-bent, with a cap crammed low on to the somewhat scowling brows.

There was something curiously distinctive about the man. Brief as was her vision of him, it possessed an odd definiteness—a vividness of impression that was rather startling. He flashed by, his arms folded across his chest, moving with long, rhythmic strokes which soon carried him to the further side of the rink. Jean's eyes followed him interestedly. He was unmistakably an Englishman, and he seemed to be as solitary as herself, but, unlike her, he appeared indifferent to the fact, absorbed in his own thoughts which, to judge by the sullen, brooding expression of his face, were not particularly pleasant ones.

Soon she lost sight of him amid the scattered groups of smoothly gliding figures. The scene reminded her of a cinema show. People darted suddenly into the picture, materializing in full detail in the space of a moment, then rushed out of it again, dwindling into insignificant black dots which merged themselves into the continuously shifting throng beyond.

At last she bent her steps towards the lower end of the rink, by common consent reserved for beginners in the art of skating. She had not skated for several years, owing to a severe strain which had left her with a weak ankle, and she felt somewhat nervous about starting again.

Rather slowly she fastened on her skates and ventured tentatively on to the ice. For a few minutes she suffered from a devastating feeling that her legs didn't belong to her, and wished heartily that she had never quitted the safe security of the bank, but before long her confidence returned, and with it that flexible ease of balance which, once acquired, is never really lost.

In a short time she was thoroughly enjoying the rapid, effortless motion, and felt herself equal to steering a safe course beyond the narrow limits of the "Mugs Corner"—as that portion of the ice allotted to novices was unkindly dubbed.

She struck out for the middle of the rink, gradually increasing her speed and relishing in the sting of the keen, cold air against her face. Then, all at once, it seemed as though the solid surface gave way beneath her foot. She lurched forward, flung violently off her balance, and in the same moment the sharp clink of metal upon the ice betrayed the cause. One of her skates insecurely fastened, had come off.

She staggered wildly, and in another instant would have fallen had not someone, swift as a shadow, glided suddenly abreast of her and, slipping a supporting arm round her waist, skated smoothly beside her, little by little slackening their mutual pace until Jean, on one blade all this time, could stop without danger of falling.

As they glided to a standstill, she turned to offer her thanks and found herself looking straight into the lean, dark face of the Englishman who had passed her when she had been watching the skaters.

He lifted his cap, and as he stood for a moment bareheaded beside her, she noticed with a curious little shock—half surprised, half appreciative—that on the left temple his dark brown hair was streaked with a single pure white lock, as though a finger had been laid upon the hair and bleached it where it lay. It conferred a certain air of distinction—an added value of contrast—just as the sharp black shadow in a neutral-tinted picture gives sudden significance to the whole conception.

The stranger was regarding Jean with a flicker of amusement in his grey eyes.

The stranger was regarding Jean with a flicker of amusement in his grey eyes.

"That was a near thing!" he observed.

Evidently he judged her to be a Frenchwoman, for he spoke in French—very fluently, but with an unmistakably English accent. Instinctively Jean, who all her life had been as frequently called upon to converse in French as English, responded in the same language.

She was breathing rather quickly, a little shaken by the suddenness of the incident, and his face took on a shade of concern.

"You're not hurt, I hope? Did you twist your ankle?"

"No, oh, no," she smiled up at him. "I can't have fastened my skate on properly, and when it shot off like that I'm afraid I rather lost my head. You see," she added explanatorily, "I haven't skated for some years. And I was never very proficient."

"I see," he said gravely. "It was a little rash of you to start again quite alone, wasn't it?"

"I suppose it was. However, as you luckily happened to be there to save me from the consequences, no harm is done. Thank you so much."

There was a note of dismissal in her voice, but apparently he failed to notice it, for he held out his hands to her, crosswise, saying:

"Let me help you to the bank, and then I'll retrieve your errant skate for you."

He so evidently expected her to comply with his suggestion that, almost without her own volition, she found herself moving with him towards the edge of the rink, her hands grasped in a close, steady clasp, and a moment later she was scrambling up the bank. Once more on level ground, she made a movement to withdraw her hands.

"I can manage quite well now," she said rather nervously. "There was something in that strong, firm grip of his which sent a curious tremor of consciousness through her."

Hidden Wealth

Believe That Money Will Soon Come From Hiding Places

Signs indicate that there is probably more money hidden under mattresses, in vases on the family mantelpiece, and under loose bricks by the fireplace in the U.S., than at any time in history, according to a study by the Investors' Syndicate of Minneapolis.

The regular Federal Reserve figures showing the amount of currency in circulation now stand approximately 25 per cent. above the average for the past five years—or one billion dollars above normal. With such a large amount of currency outstanding, yet with business subnormal, it is clear that where a dollar bill changed hands ten times during a day in 1929, it is carried around in someone's pocket all day long in 1931.

In past depressions, this hoarding has been one of the last developments before a general upturn. With such a large amount of currency in the hands of the ultimate consumer, it takes only a small increase in the speed of circulation to make a significant improvement in trade.

When a Novelist Goes Fishing

Harold MacGrath, the novelist, has an old brown vest with red spots which he wore on his first fishing trip on the St. Lawrence some 29 years ago. On every fishing trip taken since then he has worn this old vest, which to him has magical properties that seemingly bring in the fish. When he does not wear the vest the fish do not bite. When he does it he invariably has luck fishing. Mr. MacGrath does not writing on his fishing trips, but devotes himself exclusively to the matter in hand, fishing.

FARM MANAGER

A. J. Clark, farm manager, in Melita, Manitoba Zone.

Farm Management Program

Colonization Finance Corporation of Canada, Limited, Operating in Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan

With the appointment of A. J. Clark, to the position of farm manager in the Melita, Manitoba zone, the Colonization Finance Corporation of Canada, Limited, completes its farm management programme in the province of Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan. More than 400 farms in this area are now under expert management and cover an agricultural district approximately 170,000 acres.

Mr. Clark, who was born in Montreal, came to Manitoba as a child, with his parents. His natural aptitude for agriculture took him to the Manitoba Agricultural College from which he was graduated in 1917, with honours in animal husbandry. He shortly became attached to the livestock branch of the Saskatchewan Government, where he remained as purchasing agent until 1926, his duties taking him not only over western Canada but through both Ontario and Quebec. Since 1926 he has been on his own farm at Stonewall, Man., where he has specialized in pure bred shorthorn cattle and Yorkshire swine.

With Frank W. Reinehl as chief farm manager, the following six have been stationed by the Colonization Finance Corporation, Mr. Clark taking over his new duties immediately: Russell W. Gowland, Winnipeg zone; H. J. Siemens, Brandon; A. R. Judson, Dauphin; W. J. McLeod, Moosomin; A. J. Clark, Melita, and George H. Jones, Portage la Prairie.

Bees Swarm In London

Three Swarms Invaded Busy Metropolis In One Day

Each summer a swarm of bees is sure to take possession of the busy street of some city; but it is not often that three swarms arrive on the same day. That, however, happened to London.

One swarm chose King Street, Hammersmith, and flew round buses and street cars in clouds before settling on a tree; the police taking charge of the tree and barricading it. The second swarm chose the roof of a house in Shepherd's Bush; and the third chose the window-sill of a flat in Bayswater.

Canada's Oldest Tunnel

The Canadian Pacific Railway tunnel under the Town of Brockville, Ontario, was opened Sept. 16, 1854, 77 years ago. At that time the tunnel, built under great difficulties, was owned and operated by the Brockville and Ottawa Railway, later absorbed by the Canada Central Railway, and finally by the Canadian Pacific. It is said to be the oldest railway tunnel in the Dominion, and trains still pass through it daily.

PAUL IN THESSALONICA AND BEROEA

Golden Text: "Open Thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law."—Psalm 119. 18.

Lesson: Acts 17.1-15; I Thessalonians. 2.1-12.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119. 9-16.

Explanations and Comments

The First Results At Thessalonica. Acts 17.1-4.—It was Paul's plan to evangelize the leading trade and governmental centers, relying upon the spread of the gospel from these rallying points to the whole region round about. His words to the Thessalonians show that this is what happened at Thessalonica, 1 Thess. 1.8. He went from Philippi to Thessalonica and remained there some time, carrying on a most successful work, as we learn from his letters to the church he founded.

The result of Paul's preaching was that some of the Jews and devout Greeks (Greeks who attended the synagogue services and worshipped God), also many of the chief women, were convinced of the truth of the message, and "consorted Paul and Silas," cast their lot in with them and shared their way of life.

An Uproar Fomented By Jews. Acts, 17.5-9.—Here again it was the Jews who opposed Paul. They were jealous, as everywhere they were of Paul's success, and, gathering a crowd of idle loafers, they set the city in an uproar. These "vile fellows of the rabble," as Luke calls them, neither knew nor cared anything about Paul's work nor about the jealousy of the Jews, but if there was to be any kind of rioting, they wanted to be in it. The Greek word "agoraiol," translated "rabble," comes from "agora," market-place; they were men of the market-place, market-loafers, idlers who had no business of their own, and were ready for any kind of excitement or mischief that might turn up.

The house of Jason, where Paul was staying, was mobbed. Not finding the apostles there, the rabble dragged Jason and certain brethren before the rulers of the city and charged them with sedition and treason. Jason had received into his house those who "turned the world upside down," they cried.

The rulers of the city were greatly disturbed. They feared the Roman authorities higher up. "Claudius," who then held the reins of government, is represented by Suetonius as a man very jealous of the least commotion and timorous to the last degree, which obliged the rulers under him to be watchful against anything that looked dangerous. Matthew Henry. The rulers must, however, have felt that the charge lacked sufficient evidence, for they took security from Jason and the rest and let them go.

"They took bond of Jason that there would be no more rioting in the city, and there was only one method by which Jason could prevent rioting; it was to put a stop to the preaching. This was a very ingenious device. If Paul continued his ministry, he would endanger the man who had generously taken him to his house and cared for him. So Paul retreated from Thessalonica.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE

WHAT CAME BEFORE:—Late one afternoon, while on board the freighter "Madrigal" in the Chinese sea, Captain Jimmy and his friends sight a bandit ship firing on a little vessel. They take off to the rescue in their plane.

As we drew nearer, through the twilight, we could plainly see the flash from the guns of the Pirate Junk. I gave our plane every bit of gas I could and she roared down toward the scene of battle at a tremendous rate.

Suddenly the firing seemed to cease. A lucky shot must have crippled the ship they were pursuing. Quarter of a mile away and we nosed down to get a better view of what was taking place.

A little ship lay over with a heavy list to starboard, evidently leaking from a shot below the water line. A large Chinese Junk was tied behind and a boarding party of pirates swarmed all over the captured vessel. The passengers ran here and there, looking for shelter. Then as we came near we could see a number of figures bound to the rail—evidently white men and ship officers. As we passed overhead, the pirates greeted us with a volley, but they were not used to firing at a speeding plane and their shots went wide.

We swept past the boats at about one hundred and ten miles an hour. The Chinese Junk was our target and how we longed for a few nice hand grenades and a machine gun! Still, we had the shot gun and plenty of buckshot shells. We could make it hot for those pirates.

About half a mile away, I turned to the attack again. Suddenly I swooped until it seemed as if we would scrape the decks as we passed. Every bit of engine power forced us out of the sky. Our speed was tremendous. It must have been a fearful sight to see a plane making such speed straight at one. In the bow of the Junk stood a group of pirates—petrified. Then, Bang! Bang! roared the heavy shot gun, and the pirates raced for cover, but several seemed to stumble and lay quite still.

A few stray shots screamed by, fired by the more courageous of the pirates who dared show themselves above decks. Meanwhile, my gunner loaded up his heavy artillery, ready for his next attack. Again we swooped and raked the decks with buckshot but this time the pirates had seen enough of us. Someone cut the Junk loose and the pirates rushed back and crowded on full sail. Now was our chance.

Circling around to gain altitude, we suddenly dived straight for the pirate's wheel deck, banking away with our old shot guns. The helmsman of the Junk had all he could do at best, to hold the ship in her course, for a brisk wind had suddenly sprung up and she leaned heavily to one side.

Then, looking up, he caught sight of us hovering above him like a great bird of prey, just as a charge of buckshot rattled around him on the decks. With a yell, he let go the wheel and fled, and the next moment a strong gust of wind keeled the Junk over on her side. The last we saw of her, she seemed to be half full of water. Whether she ever made the shore of China, in the stifling breeze, is doubtful.

Meanwhile we circled back toward our little ship. Something white and dense rose from her decks. Smoke! Smoke! Then a flash of red flame. Sure enough—those villains had set her afire.

May Float Domestic Loan

Rumour That Loan May Be Floated Within Next Few Months

A despatch from Ottawa to the Montreal Star says:

"A domestic loan in Canada looms up as probable within a few months. Conditions for borrowing in the United States, if such were the purpose, are not propitious and, in any event, plenty of funds will be available in Canada without encountering the adversities of exchange.

"Any loan which is floated would be primarily to bear the cost of those undertakings designed for the relief of unemployment, but it could be applied to other purposes as well, and probably would be.

"The amount of flotation will be determined in the light of final estimates of requirements, but general revenue conditions clearly suggest that it will be fairly bulky."

Motor Vehicles In Canada

There were 1,239,886 motor vehicles registered in Canada at the end of 1930, an increase of 44,249 over the total registration at December 31, 1929. The "automobile density" of Canada is one motor vehicle for every eight persons in the Dominion.

The ideal for health is at least 1,000 cubic feet of space for each individual. This means for example that a room ten feet long, ten feet wide and ten feet high provides the right amount of air space for one person. Of course, there must be constant and adequate ventilation as well.

HAS NO DOUBT ABOUT RESULT OF ELECTIONS

London, Eng.—"I was never more confident of anything in my life than of the final result this election will produce," declared Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, when seen by the Canadian Press.

"At the same time," Mr. Thomas continued, "frankly I am somewhat afraid of the impression which may be held in certain foreign places, and perhaps to some extent in certain far parts of the Empire, as to the exact position prevailing here. That is one reason I favoured an early election."

"I am convinced the overwhelming mass of opinion in this country is behind the National Government and will support it even though its policy of economy may be severe. That of itself will convince the whole world of the stability of this country."

Referring to the general position of the Empire in the present economic crisis, Mr. Thomas said he was more optimistic of the situation than ever before. "Although we are off the gold standard, we are the greatest banking country in the world," he said.

"The British Empire need have no apprehensions for the future. What has struck me more than anything is the manner in which the Dominions, without a solitary exception, have accepted the situation, knowing we here should do the right thing, and being ready to give us all the help they can."

As to the fiscal policy of the National Government, Mr. Thomas said: "I am not committed to any fetish. . . . I do not think that the present is the time when a long program should be put forward. The first thing for this country to do is to deal with the adverse balance of trade."

Mr. Thomas remarked the adhesion of Canada and South Africa to the gold standard was entirely a matter for themselves. Unquestionably Canada must in the very nature of things be affected by the position of the United States, and he would not attempt to say now what should be done eventually.

British Parliament Has Been Prorogued

King George Summarizes Government's Effort To Overcome Financial Trouble

London, Eng.—The British Parliament was prorogued October 7, with a speech from the throne while excitement prevailed over the coming general election.

The King, in his speech, briefly summarized the efforts of the government to pull the nation out of its financial and economic troubles.

Only about 100 members of the House of Commons were scattered along the benches, many already having departed for their constituencies. Jeers, jokes and outbursts of party feelings interrupted the proceedings as the members shouted across the floor of the House from the various sections.

Urges Moratorium

Year's Delay On Farm Loan Interest Would Assist Farmers

Winnipeg.—A year's moratorium on farm loan interest would enable western Canada to make as rapid a recovery from the depression as any other section of the Dominion, and also would prevent many farmers giving up their farms, according to Col. H. A. Mullins, M.P. for Marquette.

Col. Mullins, who has just returned from a tour of his constituency, said if the mortgage and loan companies decline to take this course they are liable to find themselves with a lot of vacant farms on hand.

Marquette, the member said, was not asking for relief, and is well able to take care of its own people.

Gandhi Is Impatient

Wants Government To Give Pledge Regarding Future Line Of Action

London, Eng.—Although he appreciates that the general election and Britain's financial questions have necessarily made the Indian matter a secondary issue, Mahatma Gandhi is becoming restless. "I have been in England nearly a month now," he said, "and I have accomplished nothing except to become acquainted with England's poor and unemployed."

"If, however, the Government will give certain pledges respecting its future line of action in handling the Indian issue I am willing to remain here until after the election. I am not one to strike his opponent while he is down. England must be given a chance to regain its feet, but at the same time the Indian question must not go unsolved indefinitely."

"When I return to India, which I hope will be before the snow flies in England, I must have something tangible to offer my people in the way of independence. Otherwise we must renew the fight against our masters, which God forbid, because if the struggle is revived I fear Indians not only will be fighting Englishmen, but one Indian community will be pitted against another in racial strife."

Premier Ramsay MacDonald said the general election would not interfere with the Indian Round-Table Conference and that the Government will pursue its intention to settle the Indian problem before the year is over.

Mob Causes Trouble

Mounted Police Battle With Crowd In Heart Of London

London, England.—A crowd of the unemployed using sticks, stones and fire crackers, battled with mounted police in front of the British Museum in the heart of London. Unable to resist the relentless charging of the horses at a gallop and clubbing by police batons, the crowd, screaming, finally marched to Hyde Park, where it was served a free meal and went home.

The disorder began when the constabulary appeared and ordered the crowd, which had been marching down Drury Lane, gathering new recruits constantly and singing "The Red Flag" to disperse.

Some of the crowd, which immediately became infuriated, tossed fire crackers into the police ranks, stampeding the horses. Others gathered bricks and pieces of mortar and threw them at the police, who drew back and charged, arresting the ring-leaders.

Will Accept Peerage

Chancellor Of British Exchequer Decides To Take Title

London, Eng.—The Canadian Press learns that Rt. Hon. Phillip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has decided to accept a peerage.

Mr. Snowden has announced he will not seek re-election in the coming general election. Elevation to the peerage, however, would enable him to render continued valuable help to the National Government, from the Upper House, if it is successful at the polls.

Citizenship Qualities

Toronto, Ont.—"The human quality of the mass of the people of Great Britain is far too low for successful coping with the duties of modern citizenship," Dr. L. P. Jacks, editor of Hibbert's Journal, recently resigned principal of Manchester College, Oxford, England, and known as England's leading philosopher on the subject of recreation, said in a newspaper interview here.

British Apprentices To Visit Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—Eastern Canada is to be visited this month by a party of British grocers' apprentices travelling under scholarships presented by the Department of Trade and Commerce. They will visit the important centres of eastern Canada and study the food producing industries when they are at their peak of production.

Promoted Rear Admiral

London, Eng.—Captain the Hon. Alexander Ramsay, husband of Princess Patricia, has been promoted rear-admiral. He married Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connaught (former Governor-General of Canada) in 1919.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

General Jan Smuts, famous South African statesman, who was elected President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at the annual meeting in London.

No Need Of Transients

Minister Of Labour Refers To Wanderings Of Unemployed Men

Ottawa, Ont.—No necessity exists for the continual wanderings of transient unemployed men, Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labour, said here. He also announced men going to work on the trans-Canada Highway would have to provide themselves with suitable clothing or obtain it from other than governmental sources.

"There is no necessity for the continual rambling up and down of these men on the railways," said the Minister. "There is justification for it when the provinces are sending men to work on the roads. The transients are giving Canada the appearance of a country crowded with unemployed, when it is not. I am quite satisfied there is no necessity for the liberty and license in transient travelling now rampant."

During his recent western trip, Senator Robertson said he had seen no signs of unemployment at divisional points in British Columbia. The transients there seemed to have disappeared.

Nationalization Of Credits

U.F.A. Leader Says Money Should Be Provided At Cost, Rather Than For Profit

Lethbridge, Alberta.—The Canadian banking system is a debt-creating system, according to Robert Gardiner, leader of the United Farmers of Alberta group in the House of Commons and president of the organization. In an address here he declared the system should be replaced by a nationalization of currency and credits than for profit as at present.

He also suggested that possibly capitalism has reached its zenith and should be replaced by a new economic order. He modified this remark by declaring that if a system is needed to meet the demands of the age, all classes will have to work together to reach a solution. War and revolt with bloodshed will solve nothing, he maintained.

General Election In England

Vote Will Be Taken On October Twenty-Seventh

London, Eng.—Great Britain will vote October 27 in a general election on issues of outstanding importance, it announced at Buckingham Palace.

It will be the first general election since May 30, 1929, when Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin's Conservative Government was swept out of power and the Labour party returned to the helm for the first time in five years. The Liberal representation in Parliament was radically reduced but it has held the balance of power throughout the period.

The announcement came after Premier MacDonald had conferred with the King.

The new parliament will be called into session early in November, it was said, and will probably sit for six weeks up to the Christmas recess. The election campaign is expected to begin at once with all three parties girding for an epochal struggle.

Resignation Of Curtius

Withdrawal Does Not Mean Any Change In Foreign Policy Of Germany

Berlin, Germany.—Dr. Julius Curtius, who succeeded the late Dr. Gustav Stresemann as foreign minister of Germany in October, 1929, and kept in force the Stresemann policy of conciliation with Germany's wartime enemies, has submitted his resignation to Chancellor Heinrich Brüning.

His withdrawal came after bitter criticism, especially by National Socialists and Nationalists, who objected because he approved Germany's abandonment of the proposed Austro-German customs pact. The foreign minister also was attacked on his policy of friendship with France.

Government spokesmen emphatically asserted, however, that his resignation did not mean any change in Germany's foreign policy.

Protest From U.F.C.

Against Closing Of Saskatchewan Traffic And Freight Rates Branch

Saskatoon, Sask.—A strong protest against the closing of the traffic and freight rates branch of the provincial department of railways, which is heralded as a "great shock," was issued by United Farmers of Canada headquarters, tribute being paid to the value of services rendered by George H. Smith, head of the branch, now dismissed.

Disputing any motive of economy, the statement claims that it is a known fact that the government report indicates that the department has saved the province $500,000. The spokesman of the U.F.C. also indicates that with the opening of the Hudson Bay railway the functioning of the department is still more essential to the farmers of Saskatchewan.

Predicts Jobless Insurance

Calgary, Alberta.—A scheme of unemployment insurance, based upon an actuarial principle will probably be introduced during the life of the present parliament, according to Dr. G. D. Stanley, Conservative member of the House of Commons for East Calgary.

PRINCIPALS IN CHINA-JAPAN CONFLICT

C. T. Wang (left), Chinese Foreign Minister, who deplored the possibility of an international issue or a serious break with Japan over the Mukden incident. General Honjo (right), Japanese Garrison Commander at Mukden, ancient capital of Manchuria, is expected to be called upon to explain the sudden and unaccountable seizure by some of his forces at Mukden. He is said to have acted on his own authority and embarrassed his government.

MUST FORSAKE PARTY STRIFE, SAYS BRACKEN

Winnipeg, Man.—With Premier John Bracken renewing his plea for a non-party government in Manitoba and the executives of both the Liberal and Conservative parties holding meetings to discuss the proposal, its prospects of being accepted are the subject of keen speculation. At first the Conservatives appeared definitely opposed but Col. F. G. Taylor, Conservative leader, came to Winnipeg from Portage la Prairie to discuss the matter at a meeting of leading party workers.

The Liberals were favourable from the start and they too are holding counsel over the scheme. While not opposed in principle John Queen, Labour leader, objects to any economy programme under a union government which will mean the curtailment of certain social services.

In a speech at Killarney, Wednesday, October 7, the Premier made his first public pronouncement on the question. He said the proposal was not advanced with the idea of postponing the impending provincial elections. He hoped the other party leaders had not yet reached final decisions in opposition but if so the present government would carry on.

Increasing expenditure on unemployment relief and declining revenues confronted the province with a serious financial situation he said. No good purpose could be served by party strife and bickering for political advantage at such a time.

So far the Government had been able to avoid a deficit and the fact that only recently it had sold a $5,000,000 bond issue showed the province was still in a sound position. It was necessary, however, to look to the future and retrench. Both individuals and governments needed more than ever to practice the virtues of thrift and frugality.

The sharp decline in the price of farm products was affecting every sphere of activity in Manitoba, said the premier. This year the value of the province's farm products would be only $56,000,000, while at the worst of the depression in 1921-23 it was $100,000,000. While the burden fell on the farmers it affected also those engaged in other industries and in trade.

All governments, including the federal Government, were experiencing trouble owing to declining revenues and mounting expenditures, Manitoba was not alone and was better off than some others.

Discussing unemployment the Premier said, "Unfortunately a bad psychology has been created among the people. The expectation of jobs for all willing to work has created false hopes in the minds of men already harried by their difficulties. To give half-time jobs to all now out of employment would, with the materials necessary, require an amount equal to a 100 per cent. increase in the provincial budget."

"This canker of our industrial system can not be allowed to remain but quite clearly the provision of government work for everyone is out of the question. It ought to be gotten out of people's minds. Yet it is the state's responsibility to help find jobs somewhere if our economic system is not to be acknowledged seriously defective and it is likewise the state's responsibility to see that none willing to work go hungry or without clothing and shelter."

To Aid Railways

Toronto, Ont.—The Toronto Telegram says: "Toronto railwaymen will make a concerted effort to boycott retail firms which do not patronize the railway freight hauling services. At an organization meeting to be held here, representatives of the railway labour union will attempt to lay the foundation for the formation of a 'Ship-by-rail Association,' whose members will be bound to deal only with firms which patronize the railways."

Senator Morrow Obsequies

Englewood, N.J.—The body of Senator Dwight W. Morrow was lowered into a grave at Brookside Cemetery at the conclusion of simple funeral services in the First Presbyterian Church. Vice-President Curtis, members of the Morrow family and a few intimate friends stood by. There was no other service at the grave.

Over 223,000 Radios Sold

359,116 Radio Receiving Licenses Sold
In Canada In 1930

A little more than ten years ago the radio receiving set was practically an unknown quantity, for the first radio broadcast only dates from November 1920. The manufacture of radio receiving sets has now developed into a major industry in Canada, for an official report discloses that the number of such sets sold in the Dominion in 1930 totalled 223,228 valued at $22,776,225 at factory selling prices. Of this total 17,082 were completely manufactured or assembled in Canada. Of the total sales 46.7 per cent. were in the Province of Ontario; 27.5 per cent. in the Province of Quebec; 7.9 per cent. in British Columbia; 5.2 per cent. in Manitoba; 3.9 in Nova Scotia; 3.8 per cent. in Alberta; 2.7 per cent. in Saskatchewan; 2 per cent. in New Brunswick and .3 per cent. in Prince Edward Island.

At the end of 1930, there were 559,116 radio receiving licenses issued in Canada, an increase of 43 per cent. over the total issued in 1929. The Canadian law requires each owner of a radio receiving set to take out an annual license at a cost of $1, for which the Government gives certain services of advantage to radio fans. One branch of the Government Radio Branch detects and checks the cause of interference that prevent satisfactory reception.

Sunshine In Italy

Natives Commencing To Appreciate the Virtue Of Sunlight

It is a curious fact that while most Northerners think of Italy as a land whose fortunate inhabitants bask in perpetual sunshine the Italians themselves have, until very lately, treated sunlight as though it were a dangerous and malignant force. This was particularly true of the city dwellers, many of whom still keep their shutters drawn during the summer days, and only venture out of doors in the evening. During the last few years, however, there has been a change, almost a revolution, in the attitude of the Italians, especially those of the younger generation. The feud which so long divorced them from the health-giving forces of air and sun has been happily composed, and thousands of bronzed men and women and children encamped in the valleys and hills, or on the shores of Italy are now setting their joyous seal to the Concordat.—London Spectator, Eng.

Famous Wills Kept

In Somerset House

Can Be Inspected On Payment Of Small Fee

Storage accommodation at Somerset House, London, England, where wills, birth, death and marriage certificates, and divorce documents are filed, has for many years been severely taxed. The position has now been eased by the preparation of a new strong-room below the level of the Embankment, capable of holding ten million additional papers. Some of the wills date back to 1382. Among the collection are those of Shakespeare, Milton, Nelson, Wellington, Pitt, Burke, and Dr. Johnson. All these can be seen for a fee of 1s., except that of Shakespeare, for an inspection of which 2s. is charged. Altogether it is estimated that Somerset House contains fifty million documents.

French Laboratory

Making Experiment

Trying To Acclimatize Trees Which Produce Fluid Like Milk

An experiment with trees that produce milk and cream is being conducted by an important French laboratory. Several living trees of the family "Brosimum Galactodendron" were brought to France from South America, and work has been started to acclimatize them to northern European conditions. The trees, when punctured, will provide a sweet fluid like milk. It does not turn sour and laboratory tests show that it is richer than cow's milk in phosphates and sugar. It looks and tastes much like the real product and is produced at 65 per cent. of the cost of ordinary cream.

Greeks Helped Columbus

One By Prediction, One By Suggestion, and One By Error

M. Aiginites, director of the observatory at Athens, recently read a paper before the academy to prove that three ancient Greeks helped Columbus discover America, one by a suggestion, another by a prediction, and the third by a gross error. The mistake was made by the geographer Ptolemy. He estimated the distance across the Atlantic from Spain to be so slight that Columbus was convinced he could make the voyage. The other Greeks, according to M. Aiginites, also were geographers, Eratosthenes and Strabo. The former is believed to have been the first to suggest such a voyage and the latter predicted that new worlds might be discovered below the Atlantic horizon.

Cheese Curing During Fall Months

Dr. J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, calls attention to the importance of maintaining adequate temperatures for the curing of cheese made during the fall months, particularly October and November. The temperature of the curing rooms should never be allowed to go below 60 degrees Fahrenheit, and the cheese should be turned every day. A fire in the curing room keeps the air drier and gives the cheese better rinds while maintaining adequate temperatures.

Good has but one enemy, the evil, but the evil has two enemies, the good and itself.

Bedouin Given Credit Of Inventing Alphabet

Chicago Professor's Idea Upsets Theory Of Many Scholars

Some unknown Bedouin mine foreman, working for the ancient Egyptians, about 1,800 years before Christ, is credited by Prof. Martin Sprengling, of the University of Chicago, with inventing the A, B, C. The mine foreman, puzzled by the complex hieroglyphics of his masters, sought a shorter way to keep his records, and simplified his work by developing a rudimentary alphabet, in the opinion of Prof. Sprengling. He based his theory on his translation of the Sinal inscriptions, found in 1904 by Sir Flinders Petrie, in Sinal, which lies between Egypt and the northern part of Arabia. His theory would upset that of many scholars who have attributed the development of the alphabet to the Phoenicians.

Must Be Good Fighters

French Scientist Wants To Raise Race Of Super-Cats

The production of a race of "super-cats" capable of driving all mice and rats from any city in France was forecast by Dr. Jean Loir, distinguished scientist and nephew of the famous Pasteur.

Dr. Loir said he was developing the cats at Havre where secret tests have made devastating inroads on rodents, some as large as small dogs, along the wharves.

Dr. Loir is seeking cats with a highly developed sense of smell and with fighting ability. Most of the animals with which he has experimented so far have been remarkable for the length of their whiskers. Edouard Herriot, mayor of Lyons, has invited Dr. Loir to go to that city where special facilities would be accorded him for further experiments.

Patient Was Hypnotized

Introducing New Method Of Painless Dental Operation

The Brooklyn Eagle has reported a bloodless and painless dental operation with hypnotism replacing anesthetic. The paper said the experiment was witnessed by its own science editor in the offices of Dr. A. J. Bruchlacher, Brooklyn dentist.

Walter L. Orton, mechanical engineer and vice-president of the Brooklyn Psychic Research society, kept a woman whose name was given only as "Miss M. C." under hypnotic influence for 15 minutes, the paper said, while Dr. Bruchlacher extracted a tooth, made an incision in a gum and cut away a growth of bone.

ACID STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior toothpaste that safeguards against acid-mouth. (Made in Canada.)

A Cherished Record

Mother Keeps Safely Only Link With Dead Son

With millions of dollars stored away in the vaults of one of Washington's largest financial institutions, it will naturally surprise one to learn that a cracked phonograph record, held for safe keeping there, is "the most precious thing" under lock and key. And why shouldn't it be? Listen what the head of the bank related interestingly the other day, after he looked up from his desk only to see standing before him a little old woman, dressed in black. Placing a round package on the desk he said she told him—"Please, I want this put away where it will be safe. It is very precious to me." Further inquiry revealed, the banker said: "In 1917 her son, a singer in a local cabaret, marched away to war and stayed in Flanders Field. One of the things she had to remember him by was a phonograph record which he had made before he left. It was old and scuffed now, and had a crack in it, but his voice, singing one of the numbers he had sung at the cabaret, was still recognizable. It was the record she wanted to preserve. And now, once a year, on her son's birthday, the banker said, the little old woman comes to the bank and takes home the record."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

BY TIME UNSTAINED

This is the greatest love, the love that lives
Unchanged by changing time and circumstance,
That still a portion of its glamour gives
To touch with peace each whim of madcap Chance.
It lends to life's adventure, strange and long,
Always a blessing by naught else conferred;
It is the sweetness lingering after song,
The hidden meaning of the spoken word.

No part in it have years, for it may be
The treasure of the heart from youth to age,
Or but an hour's sudden ecstasy,
Obliterated by life's turning page.
The fair ideal, desired and unattained,
This is the only love by time unstained.

Moon Erratic In Its Course

The moon is so erratic, scientists say, that its position cannot be determined as exactly as that of stars. That is, it is never where it should be in its theoretical orbit, and what is so strange, it is the only body known to disobey such laws. In an effort to solve the mystery, computers of the naval almanac office are making a two-year check on the occultations of stars by the moon.

The most peaceful place in which to live is within one's income.

And feel through fair or darker days
He knoweth best.

Idea Claimed For Chinese

Antiquarians Say They Were Inventors Of Ink and Fountain Pens

The idea of a fountain pen goes a very long way back, and no one man can be considered its inventor. Certainly a crude fountain pen was in use in England in the seventeenth century, but antiquarians go back a good deal further than that in their history. It is claimed that the idea was Chinese—they were the inventors of ink—and fountain pens were in use in China hundreds of years before the Christian era began.

A man's good judgment usually shows up the day after.
